

Possessed by: Homeless People, Reporters, Beat Cops, Criminals, Redcaps

Specialties: Fencing, Gangs, Drugs, I Know a Guy, Information

Subterfuge

Subterfuge allows a character to project a facade while concealing her true motives and feelings. Through intrigue, deceit, and double-dealing, she can use people's motives against them. A character skilled in subterfuge can divert blame and adjust situations without others spotting her influence.

- ☉ Novice: You're rarely caught lying.
- ☉☉ Practiced: Diverting attention comes naturally.
- ☉☉☉ Competent: You don't even need to lie to conceal the truth.
- ☉☉☉☉ Expert: You can keep a con going as long as it suits you.
- ☉☉☉☉☉ Master: No one even suspects you.

Possessed by: Pick-Up Artists, Lawyers, Con Artists, Spies, Pooka

Specialties: Diversions, Seduction, The Long Con, Little White Lies, It Wasn't Me

Hobby Talent

This category encompasses anything self-taught. It tends to be more active than intellectual. Before allowing a Hobby Talent, the Storyteller should first determine if it would fit better as a specialty under an existing Talent (for example, Search and Eavesdropping would be specialties under Alertness).

- ☉ Novice: You know the basics.
- ☉☉ Practiced: You have a good grasp on the hobby.
- ☉☉☉ Competent: Other practitioners regard you as competent.
- ☉☉☉☉ Expert: You know your Talent's subtleties.
- ☉☉☉☉☉ Master: Others seek you out for your expertise.

Suggested Hobby Talents: Artistic Expression, Carousing, Fortune-Telling, Negotiation, Style

Skills

Skills require instruction or some form of training period. If a character attempts an action that requires a Skill for which he has no rating, his difficulty is increased by one. A person with no experience in the Skill will never be as effective as someone with even basic training.