

Title

Title denotes a character's rank within Kithain society. Not all changelings possess a title, and few attain a station above esquire. Title by itself imparts little tangible power. The majority of nobles have no holdings. However, even a landless baron or duke wields tremendous social influence. Changelings are far more willing to trade favors with those in power, whether to further their own social mobility or because most titles, especially knighthood, are earned through skill and accomplishment.

Sidhe are the most common kith to be awarded titles, but since the Treaty of Concord, it is not uncommon to see members of other kiths attain rank, usually as squires and knights. Any commoner inducted into the sphere of nobility gains the Boon and Flaw of the house that takes her in.

Treasures

A Treasure is a mundane item imbued with Glamour. Like changelings, Treasures exist simultaneously in the Autumn Realm and the chimerical world. They are capable of specific magical abilities based on the Glamour fused within them. Usually, this is an Art bound into the Treasure, but occasionally a Treasure will form due to the overwhelming emotions connected with the object.

A changeling cannot forget herself due to Banality as long as she is holding a Treasure. Likewise, mortals become enchanted when touched by a Treasure. For more information about Treasures, their creation, and examples, see Chapter Seven: The Dreaming.

Pooling Backgrounds

Pooled Backgrounds are shared resources — they are the motley's communal property. Members of the motley may wish to pool their Contacts, Holdings, Resources, or Retinue ratings in order to achieve greater things than they could individually. Anyone who contributes to the pooled Background points, whether a single dot or five, has equal access to the pooled Backgrounds.

The Anchor

The players must choose one Background to anchor all of their pooled Backgrounds together. The anchor forms the
